

The Social Science in Social and Complex Globalized Contexts

Nayibe Peña Frade¹

Abstract:

The objectivity, the neutrality and the universality of the Social Sciences are being strongly challenged in recent years. In this article are presented: the circumstances that contribute to enhance such doubts, the outlines of the critics, and the alternatives proposed to reconstruct the Social Science or to turn it in something new and different. Finally, there are mentioned the central themes of the so called Critic Theories, including, at first, studies and theorists that have deepened these sort of analysis, and in a second instance, there are mentioned those that have developed new or different topics of interest under the same theory.

Key Words: the subaltern, Colonialism, West, Critic Theories, Social Sciences.

¹Email: nayibe.pena@fuac.edu.co
