

Everyday Tactics of Central American Workers in Mexican border Towns between Mexico and Guatemala

Diego Noel Ramos Rojas¹

Abstract:

This paper focuses in the everyday tactics of Central American Workers traveling to Chiapas to perform economic activities (commuters), in a daily basis. The social production of meaning was analyzed mainly by testimonies categorized in three dimensions: personal, migratory and laboral. From this investigation it can be detected their capacity to create a space for action, and to build livelihoods even in the border.
