

Multiple Frontiers: Gender, Intersectionality and Citizenship

Itzel A. Sosa-Sánchez¹

Abstract:

The aim of this essay is to present a reflection about gender and citizenship recognizing gender as one of the main frontiers over the modern construction of citizenship. Following the contemporary debate on citizenship we suggest to incorporate the intersectionality approach in order to make visible other relevant categories (frontiers) of social differentiation, as well as the consequences of them over the citizenship status and over the sexual and reproductive rights.

Key words: gender, citizenship, civic stratification, intersectionality.

¹Email: itzela@correo.crim.unam.mx
